

War, Wealth & Work

in the Christian Ethical Tradition

Christian ideas of what is ethical seem to differ across history. How do we make sense of this? What role should the long tradition of Christian ethical thought play in our political and social discussions today? What is the relevance of Biblical texts, early church writings, medieval debates about money, early modern Protestant and Catholic polemics, and Victorian-era papal encyclicals to a time of drones, cryptocurrency, and AI agents? We will consider these questions and more through focused reflection on three long-debated topics of Christian ethics.

SATURDAY, 26 SEPTEMBER

War : Can we love our enemies while killing them?

SATURDAY, 24 OCTOBER

Wealth : Can we have riches without worshipping them?

SATURDAY, 21 NOVEMBER

Work : Is it a calling or a curse?
